Department of Justice officials were today considering what, if any, steps they would take in view of the refusal of the Supreme Court to review the action of the sixth circuit court of appeals in reversing the conviction of National Cash Register officials of violations of the Sherman law. It was not believed here, that any announcement of the government's purpose would be made pending a careful study, of the case in the light of the Supreme Court's decision.

step under consideration is to take the case back to the trial court with a view to making effective the temaining counts in the indictments against the cash register defendants. Department of Justice officials have made no secret that they considered the efficacy of the criminal section of the Sherman law was at stake in yesterday's case, which was lost to the covernment.
